Cardiac Arrest Survivor Reunites with Holy Cross Health and Pompano Beach Fire Rescue Teams Who Saved His Life

Ken Sposato regains his health and independence thanks to a treatment called Targeted Temperature Management

In recognition of National Trauma Survivors Day and during National Hospital Week, Holy Cross Health hosted a heart-warming reunion between cardiac arrest survivor Ken Sposato, Pompano Beach Fire Rescue and the Holy Cross Health team who are responsible for saving his life after he was transported to the hospital in February.

"I thank everyone for saving me," Lauderdale-By-The-Sea resident Sposato said. "Holy Cross has the best care anywhere. Everyone was very professional, knew their job and did it well. You can imagine my family was so fragile during this difficult time, but [Holy Cross] was always there for them and provided comfort and support beyond the call of duty."

Sposato celebrated his 76th birthday at the end of May thanks to the team that induced hypothermia when he suffered a cardiac arrest. Tracey Melhuish, MSN, R.N., CCRN, Clinical Practice Specialist at Holy Cross Health, explained how Targeted Temperature Management (TTM) can help some patients regain brain function following cardiac arrest.

TTM is a treatment that is used to lower and/or maintain a target body temperature of some patients who suffer cardiac arrest once their heart begins beating again, helping some patients regain brain function and increasing the likelihood they will wake up. The procedure consists of lowering the patient's body temperature to 32-36°C. This is achieved by placing an intravascular catheter in the body. After 24 hours, the body is gradually rewarmed using the same intravascular catheter and equipment re-warming the body slowly at 0.25°C to a target of 36.1°C.

"It's a great honor to be here celebrating this outcome. This is a win for the entire system here in Broward County," said John P. Cunha, D.O., emergency medicine physician at Holy Cross Health. "Broward

The Sposato family with Holy Cross Health physicians

County residents should know that from the moment you call 9-1-1 to those dispatchers walking you through CPR to getting the medics to take over the care, then getting you to an appropriate hospital, it takes every step of the chain of survival to be precise. In this particular instance, it was precise."

After recovering in the Holy Cross ICU and the Inpatient Rehabilitation Unit, Sposato was discharged and is currently living independently at home with his wife Karen Sposato. Iman Dabiri, M.D., neurocritical care intensivist; Matthew Whitton, EMS Chief, Pompano Beach Fire Rescue; and others involved in his lifesaving care were also present.

Holy Cross Health Awarded on Newsweek's America's Best-In-State Hospitals 2024 List

Holy Cross Health has been awarded on Newsweek's list of America's Best-In-State Hospitals 2024. This prestigious award is presented by Newsweek and Statista Inc., the world-leading statistics portal and industry ranking provider. The awards list can be viewed on Newsweek's website.

Proximity and access are of the utmost importance when choosing between top hospitals. The America's Best-In-State Hospitals 2024 ranking was created to identify the top hospitals at the state level. Hospitals from all U.S. states were eligible for the ranking and included in the nationwide survey. The 25 states with the most hospitals according to the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services (CMS) were surveyed individually. The remaining states were grouped into 4 regions: Northeast, Midwest, West and South. Leading hospitals from these states were considered accordingly. Four data sources were used for the evaluation:

Nationwide online survey: Over 10,000 medical professionals (doctors, hospital managers and healthcare workers) were asked to recommend the best hospitals (in and out of state) based on their expertise.

Quality Metrics Data: Data from Medicare and Medicare Services available for Mortality, Safety, Readmission, Experience and Timely & Effective Care was considered.

Patient Experience: Cleanliness of the hospitals and quietness, communication of the nurses/doctors and staff responsiveness, care transition, medicine communication and discharge information.

PROMS Implementation survey: To account for the increasing importance of Patient Reported Outcome Measures (PROMs).

"Holy Cross Health is ecstatic to be recognized on Newsweek's list of America's Best-In-State Hospitals 2024," said Mark Doyle, President and CEO of Holy Cross Health.

Holy Cross Health Emergency Drive Thru entrance named in his honor

Fort Lauderdale, Fla. June 26, 2024 – Philanthropist and financier Donald Sussman, the founder and chief investment officer of Paloma Partners, has made a $1 million donation to Holy Cross Health to modernize the building that will become the new Holy Cross Family Health Center.

"Access to high-quality and equitable healthcare is essential. ADVANCES IN TECHNOLOGY

Holy Cross Health's Catherine Yardley Comprehensive Pulmonary Center Helps Patients Breathe Easier with New State-of-the-Art High Altitude Simulation Test

Certified in pulmonary function technology (CPFT), the team at the state-of-the-art Pulmonary Function Lab at Holy Cross Health's Catherine Yardley Comprehensive Pulmonary Center is prepared to diagnose and treat the full spectrum of lung disorders.

The center recently added the High Altitude Simulation Test (HAST) to determine the need for supplemental oxygen when flying on an airplane or traveling to a higher altitude. The HAST is a safety test for patients who suffer from lung and/or heart disease who may not have the capacity to compensate for the lower oxygen levels experienced while traveling in an airplane and when in mountainous geographical areas like Colorado.

Many patients with underlying pulmonary disease travel by air each year and are therefore at risk for significant cardiopulmonary effects of induced hypoxia at higher altitudes. This includes patients who have severe obstructive disease such as COPD or poorly controlled obstructive airways disease, symptomatic restrictive chest wall condition or respiratory muscle weakness, interstitial lung disease, pulmonary hypertension and lung cancer, as well as patients who have been hospitalized for a respiratory incident within six weeks of intended air travel.

BY HELEN VISCO,

The HAST provides a simple way to identify those patients at risk by simulating conditions encountered at high altitude. It is an inexpensive diagnostic test in which a trained Respiratory Therapist (RT) can effectively calculate a patient's supplemental oxygen needs for traveling at high altitude. The patient's vital signs are initially taken at baseline and continuously throughout the procedure. These may include, but are not limited to, their oxygen saturation in arterial blood, heart rate, blood pressure, respiratory rate/depth and skin/mucosal color. A face oxygen mask is then placed on the patient. The mask is fed with a special gas mixture that simulates the lower oxygen level at high altitudes. During this time, the RT continuously observes, assesses and monitors the patient's oxygen saturation. If it drops below 90%, a nasal cannula is applied and adjusted to a level that raises the oxygen saturation back up to 90% or greater. This oxygen level is documented along with all other vital signs, and it is reported to the ordering physician.

Our pulmonary function lead, Victor Falcon CPFT, RRT, takes an active role in maintaining quality standards that produce precise test results. Board-certified pulmonologists interpret the results to provide accurate diagnosis for effective treatment.

The HAST can determine the amount of supplemental oxygen needed during air travel. Identifying this prior to flying can reduce the chance of an incident occurring during travel, thus allowing the patient to feel safe and enjoy their trip.

Holy Cross Health's Catherine Yardley Comprehensive Pulmonary Center

added the HAST to provide a comprehensive diagnostic menu of tests to best diagnose lung impairment. I believe we are the only facility in Broward County to offer this and the only other one that I know of is in Miami.

In addition, we offer Methacholine Challenge testing, Mannitol Challenge testing and Fractioned Exhaled Nitric Oxide testing (FeNO) to better diagnose and treat asthma, as well as a smoking cessation program. By offering an array of tests we can determine the condition of your lungs, resistance of airflow, lung volumes, the ability of your lungs to absorb and release oxygen and CO₂, and how well your airways respond to breathing medications.

Advanced Risk Assessment and Screening for Women at Increased Risk for Breast Cancer

Women who are at an increased risk for breast cancer benefit from high-risk breast surveillance and assessment. Women who may be at an increased lifetime risk of developing breast cancer include those with a close family history of breast or ovarian cancer, a genetic predisposition based on an inherited gene mutation (ex. BRCA 1/2 mutations), dense breasts, previous breast biopsies resulting in abnormal or atypical cells and/or prior chest radiation therapy between 10-30 years of age.

A woman at high risk for breast cancer is noted to have a Tyrer-Cuzick lifetime risk calculation of 20% or greater. In these cases, high risk surveillance could be indicated which includes clinical breast exams (CBE) every six months and mammograms once a year, as well as annual breast MRIs with intravenous contrast. Breast imaging is usually started at age 40, unless a patient's doctor requests the patient begin at an earlier age.

Patients at high risk for breast cancer are also educated regarding breast awareness for new breast symptoms or issues and lifestyle changes such as exercise, smoking cessation, moderation of alcohol consumption, weight management, prophylactic breast surgery and risk-reducing medications. It is imperative that the medical community understand the importance of screening women for breast cancer, and referring women who are at an increased risk for specialized breast evaluation.

Currently at Holy Cross Health, within the Surgical Oncology department, there is an established high risk breast clinic that is open for appointments. Women who are determined to be at an increased risk for breast cancer in the high-risk breast clinic will have a risk assessment completed as well as counseling and education regarding recommendations and interventions at the initial and subsequent visits.

Genetic screening and testing are offered to women who meet criteria according to the National Comprehensive Cancer Network (NCCN). Patients who are determined to have an increased risk for breast cancer related to a genetic predisposition are also followed for high-risk surveillance and may also be evaluated by a breast surgeon in the office to discuss surgical risk-reducing options.

At another one of Holy Cross Health's facilities, the Dorothy Mangurian Comprehensive Women's Center, the Partners in Breast Health program provides outreach education, clinical breast exams, screening mammograms and diagnostic procedures to lower income and minority women ages 40 and older who lack access to healthcare services. The program also provides services to symptomatic women who are younger than 40.

Committed to providing patients with quality care, The Michael and Dianne Bienes Comprehensive Cancer Center at Holy Cross Health maintains accreditation from the National Accreditation Program for Breast Centers (NAPBC), a quality program administered by the American College of Surgeons (ACS).

The Center can be reached at (954) 542-6700.

Holy Cross Honors Cassels Tower Resident For 65 Years Of Selfless Work

Carmel Provencal is shown standing outside Holy Cross Hospital in 1960.

It may be no coincidence that Carmel Provencal arrived in Ft. Lauderdale from Michigan on the same day in 1959 as a group of Sisters of Mercy from Pittsburgh.

When the 17-year Cassels Tower resident, now 97, first met them that summer, the sisters wore black wool habits.

She told the women she was a seamstress and could make them white cotton habits that would feel cooler in the Florida heat. She sewed three habits each for the 10 sisters.

"That was quite a number," said Ms. Provencal, "especially with all those pleats."

Over the years, she has stitched countless items for the hospital, including knit caps and blankets for babies, bags that attach to walkers, mats for surgical instruments in the operating room, and quilts for patients in palliative care and hospice.

Holy Cross recently honored Provencal for 65 years of volunteering, mostly as a seamstress. The hospital said she had logged 45,360 hours over the years. Holy Cross is a member of Trinity Health.

Ms. Provencal said that she has actually sewed for the hospital for about 60 years, since she has slowed down in recent years and her hands don't give her the ability to do as much work as she used to. But she was thrilled with the recent recognition.

"I am so glad that this has come to the surface, what I have done in the past," she said. "I really feel rewarded."

She also worked in other areas as a member of the hospital auxiliary, including the front desk, gift shop and auxiliary office. She was also a Mercy Associate for about 15 years. Mercy Associates partner with the Sisters of Mercy to share in their spiritual life and service to others.

Over the years, she has stitched countless items for the hospital, including knit caps and blankets for babies, bags that attach to walkers, mats for surgical instruments in the operating room, and quilts for patients in palliative care and hospice.

"Carmel embodies the core values of Holy Cross," said Mark Doyle, president and CEO of Holy Cross Health.

He presented Ms. Provencal with a plaque and flowers at a celebration for her during National Volunteer Month. "She is an integral part of Holy Cross and a true treasure to us," Doyle said. "Over the years, she has touched the lives of so many here at Holy Cross and in our community."

Holy Cross Health Emergency Drive Thru entrance named in his honor

Philanthropist and financier Donald Sussman, the founder and chief investment officer of Paloma Partners, has made a $1 million donation to Holy Cross Health to modernize the building that will become the new Holy Cross Family Health Center.

"Access to high-quality and equitable healthcare is essential. To recognize the donation, the drop-off and pick-up area at the Holy Cross Health Emergency Department has been named the S. Donald Sussman Emergency Drive Thru Entrance. The new Emergency Department signage was unveiled in a special ceremony culminating with a dedication and blessing by Holy Cross Health Mission Leader Mary Carter Warren.

"We are at the forefront of transformation," said Holy Cross Health President and CEO Mark Doyle. "That is because of visionaries like Donald who generously support our mission and our community."

With Sussman's $1 million gift, the Holy Cross Family Health Center will be modernized with cutting-edge technology and equipment and will be a beacon of hope for the area's underserved community, providing accessible outpatient healthcare services to meet the diverse needs of adults and children.
